

LANGUAGES AND LINGUISTICS

In an increasingly interdependent world community, the mission of the Department of Languages and Linguistics is to help students become articulate, knowledgeable and culturally aware, in accordance with the values and traditions of Saint Joseph's University and the Society of Jesus. We pursue this mission by:

- Fostering language proficiency
- Promoting an appreciation for the richness and complexity of language
- Deepening students' understanding of cultural diversity
- Encouraging student engagement in active, collaborative and critical learning
- Emphasizing a learner-centered pedagogy and care for the individual

Upper Division Courses Taken in Study Abroad Programs

The Department will count a maximum of four upper division courses toward all majors offered by the Department. This represents half of the upper division courses required. A total of three courses taken abroad may count for any minor.

Faculty

Faculty within the Department of Languages and Linguistics have received several prestigious fellowships and are well-established experts in language, culture, history and more. Faculty members are dedicated to providing an interactive, learner-centered environment that allows students to actively participate in the curriculum and make significant use of digital media and current events.
